Ownership is a unique social phenomenon and the core of any economic system, no human activity is performed without ownership. All this conditions the importance of determining the essence of this phenomenon. At the same time, until now, both in domestic and foreign science there is no unity of views on the interpretation of the concept and content of ownership. The paper analyzes the legal and economic interpretation of the category of ownership, their commonality and difference. It was fixed the need to deepen economic research of the essence and forms of ownership demonstration. On the basis of a comprehensive analysis of existing views and approaches to the definition of the concept and essence of the ownership the economic and legal content of this category was justified that allowed the author to consider ownership as a special phenomenon of economy and law. The legal and economic aspects of the content of ownership are not mutually exclusive or incompatible, but complementary, interconnected, mutually dependent and conditioned, that is, the system of industrial relations between people cannot act and progress outside the law what the creative role of the state is conditioned by, as well as legal norms cannot regulate what does not exist.
